

Acknowledgments

The 2020 U.S. Religion Census contains statistics for 372 religious bodies or groups, providing information on the number of their congregations within each state and county of the United States.

The Association of Statisticians of American Religious Bodies (ASARB) conducted this research under the direction of the ASARB Religion Census Operations Committee. Clifford Grammich, Glenmary Research Center (Catholic), served as chairman of the committee, and Richard Houseal, Church of the Nazarene, served as Operations Committee Liaison. Other members of the committee were Erica Dollhopf, United Church of Christ; Mary Gautier, The Center for Applied Research in the Apostolate at Georgetown University (Catholic); Dale Jones, Church of the Nazarene; Alexei Krindatch, U.S. Census of Orthodox Christian Churches; Richie Stanley, Southern Baptist Convention; and Scott Thumma, Hartford Institute for Religion Research.

The Research Services office of the Church of the Nazarene Global Ministry Center in Lenexa, Kansas, made members of their staff available for correspondence, distributing the survey instruments, collecting the data, and preparing the data for posting. In particular, Laura Lance geocoded the county locations for numerous congregations and developed the online mapping features. Their availability and interest allowed us to coordinate this large task, and their continued support has been invaluable.

Several other persons provided special assistance in gathering data. Aaron Spiegel of the Synagogue Studies Institute provided data on Jewish synagogues and adherents. Alexei Krindatch collected data for Orthodox Christian Churches. Scott Thumma provided data on nondenominational and independent Christian churches. Joseph Donnermeyer compiled data on Amish settlements. Cory Anderson of the Amish and Plain Anabaptist Studies Association provided data on plain Anabaptist communities. Richard H. Taylor helped collect data for several groups. Ihsan Bagby provided data on Muslim congregations and adherents. J. Gordon Melton collected data on Buddhist, Hindu, Jain, Shinto, Sikh, and Tao congregations. Staff members of the Center for Applied Research in the Apostolate at Georgetown University and of the Hartford Institute for Religion Research assisted in follow-up contacts with religious bodies.

We also thank Richard Houseal, Scott Thumma, and Paul Welty for their work in constructing our project website, and Chris Bader of the Association of Religion Data Archives (ARDA) for arranging our data to be available on the ARDA website.

We gratefully acknowledge the generous grant from the Lilly Endowment, Inc., of Indianapolis, Indiana. We also acknowledge in-kind funding contributions from the Church of the Nazarene, the Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod, the Southern Baptist Convention, and the United Church of Christ. The ARDA was instrumental in securing funding for the collection of Buddhist and Hindu counts. Finally, the Glenmary Research Center funded the production of the Major Religious Families wall map.

Our hope is that these data, despite their limitations, will stimulate ecumenical awareness at the judicatory and county levels, aid in denominational planning, and contribute to the study of long-range trends in U.S. religion.

Introduction

Scope of the Study

The 2020 U.S. Religion Census, sponsored by the Association of Statisticians of American Religious Bodies (ASARB), presents data for 372 religious bodies. These data include 354 Christian denominations, associations, or communions (including Latter-day Saints, Messianic Jews, Unitarian/Universalist, and non-denominational groups); counts of Jain, Shinto, Sikh, Tao, Zoroastrian, American Ethical Union, and National Spiritualist Association congregations; and counts of congregations and affiliated individuals for Bahá'í, three Buddhist groupings, two Hindu groupings, four Jewish groupings, and Muslims.

The sponsors invited all religious bodies that could be identified as having congregations in the United States to participate. We also made several attempts to identify and include data from several religious bodies which have not traditionally participated or been underrepresented in similar past studies. The 372 religious bodies for which we report data have 356,642 congregations and 161,224,088 adherents.¹

The 2020 U.S. Religion Census is related to six previous studies.² The first reported 1952 statistics and was sponsored and published by the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. in a series of

² Laura B. Whitman and Glen W. Trimble, 1956-1958, Churches and Church Membership in the United States: An Enumeration and analysis by Counties, States, and Regions (80 bulletins), New York: National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U.S.A.; Douglas Johnson, Paul R. Picard, and Bernard Quinn, 1974, Churches and Church Membership in the United States 1971: An Enumeration by Region, State, and County, Washington, D.C.: Glenmary Research Center; Bernard Quinn, Herman Anderson, Martin Bradley, Paul Goetting and Peggy Shriver, 1982, Churches and Church Membership in the United States 1980: An Enumeration by Region, State, and County Based on Data Reported by 111 Religious Bodies, Atlanta: Glenmary Research Center; Martin B. bulletins between 1956 and 1958. The second reported 1971 statistics and was sponsored by the Office of Research, Evaluation and Planning of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., the Department of Research and Statistics of the Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod, and the Glenmary Research Center. It was published in 1974 by the Glenmary Research Center. The third, published in 1982, reported 1980 statistics and was sponsored by the Department of Records and Research of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, the Research Services Department of the Sunday School Board of the Southern Baptist Convention, the Office of Research, Evaluation and Planning of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., the Lutheran Council in the U.S.A., and the Glenmary Research Center. Since 1990, this work has been sponsored by the ASARB. The fourth study, published in 1992, reported 1990 statistics. The fifth, published in 2002, reported 2000 statistics. The sixth, published in 2012, reported 2010 statistics.

Participating Religious Bodies

The 19 religious groupings in the 2020 U.S. Religion Census with at least one million adherents account for 89.5 percent of the reported adherents. The 39 religious groupings with 100,000 to 999,999 adherents account for an additional 9.2 percent. The 159 other groupings reporting adherents account for 1.3 percent. Congregations, but not adherents, are reported for an additional 155 groupings.

The following groups are included in the 2020 U.S. Religion Census. The number of counties in which the groups report congregations or adherents will provide a general idea of their geographic extension. In 2020, there were 3,143 counties or county-equivalents in the United States.

Inclusiveness of the Study

The 2020 U.S. Religion Census identified, at the county-level, nearly 357,000 congregations and more than 161 million adherents. Because the total number of religious congregations and adherents in the United States is not known, we do not know what percent of total religious adherents and congregations in the nation this represents.

In recent decades, estimates for the total number of religious congregations in the United States have ranged from 268,000 to 414,000.³ From this, we surmise that we have accounted for a large majority of U.S. religious congregations, but we are unable to estimate a more precise proportion.

The number of adherents in this study represents 48.6 percent of the U.S. Census 2020 population. By contrast, national surveys show higher levels of religious identification. The 2018 General Social Survey (GSS) of the National Opinion Research Center, the last GSS conducted before 2020, indicated that 76.5 percent of adult respondents identify with a religious group.⁴ U.S. Religion Census 2020 data on adherents reflect affiliation with a specific congregation rather than self-identification.

For instance, the GSS for 2018 indicated that 23.1 percent of the population identifies as Catholic, and that 19.1 percent of the population both identifies as Catholic and attends religious services more frequently than “never.” Multiplying these population percentages by the Census 2020 population count indicates a total Catholic population of 76.6 million and an “ever”-attend Catholic population of 63.3 million. Our count of Catholics associated with an individual church was 61.8 million.

Similarly, many Protestants may identify with a specific tradition but not with a specific denomination, much less an individual congregation. For instance, the GSS for 2018 indicates 3.7 percent of the population identifies as Lutheran, 3.1 percent identifies as Lutheran and attends religious services more frequently than “never,” and 1.4 percent identifies with a specific Lutheran denomination (e.g., Evangelical Lutheran Church in America) and attends religious services more frequently than “never.” Applying these percentages to Census 2020 figures indicates there is a Lutheran population of 12.2 million, a Lutheran population that attends religious services more frequently than “never” of 10.2 million, and a Lutheran population that attends religious services more frequently than “never” and identifies with a specific Lutheran denomination of 4.6 million. Our count of Lutherans associated with a specific religious body is 5.6 million.

Several religious bodies merit special discussion regarding inclusiveness.

First, there are independent and community churches, religious movements, and associations we were not able to identify and whose membership is unknown. Nevertheless, for this study, Scott Thumma of the Hartford Institute for Religion Research compiled statistics for 44,319 independent Christian congregations and 21,095,641 adherents not known to be affiliated with any other Christian body. See Appendix B for more details on this work.

Second, Aaron Spiegel of the Synagogue Studies Institute provided congregational-level counts for Jewish synagogues and adherents by four Jewish traditions. These data are not comparable for those on Judaism appearing before 2010, but those for traditions appearing in 2010 are comparable. See Appendix C for more details.

Third, we made several efforts to enlist the participation of historically African American denominations. Using mailing lists and on-line church location systems, we enumerated 23,874 congregations and ³ See, for example, Simon G. Brauer, 2017, “How Many Congregations Are There? Updating a Survey-Based Estimate,” Journal for the Scientific Study of Religion, Vol. 56, No. 2, pp. 438-448.

⁴ Tom W. Smith et al., serial, General Social Surveys, Chicago: National Opinion Research Center.

7,479,480 adherents for 22 African American denominations. Because the quality and coverage of these sources varies over time, estimates for individual bodies should not be considered comparable over time. See Appendix D for more details. See also Appendix E for more general discussion of our use of mailing address lists.

Fourth, we divide 23 Orthodox Christian bodies into two families, Eastern Orthodox and Oriental Orthodox Churches, accounting for 1,167,178 adherents total. Alexei Krindatch of the U.S. Census of Orthodox Christian Churches collected the data on Orthodox Christian groups. See Appendix F for details on his work.

Fifth, several other groups received special attention for this study. Further details on Buddhist groupings are in Appendix G, and those on Hindu groupings are in Appendix H. Joseph F. Donnermeyer of The Ohio State University provided data on Amish groups and adherents; his methods are detailed in Appendix I. Cory Anderson of the Amish and Plain Anabaptist Studies Association provided data on plain Anabaptist communities; his methods are detailed in Appendix J. Appendix K presents further details of Muslim data gathering by Ihsan Bagby.

Problems

Defining Individual Affiliation

Our most critical problem is defining membership and adherence. Because there is no generally acceptable definition of membership applicable across bodies, we left the designation of members to the religious bodies themselves. Many comment on their definition in Appendix A.

In an effort to achieve comparability of data, we asked participating religious bodies to report two categories of individuals. These were MEMBERS: all individuals with full membership status. We do not report these data, using them primarily to estimate adherents where necessary, but they are available upon request.

TOTAL ADHERENTS: all members, including full members, their children, and the estimated number of other participants who are not considered members; for example, the “baptized,” those not considered as communicant, confirmed, or full members, such as “those not confirmed” and “those not eligible for communion.”

The 2020 U.S. Religion Census reports congregations for 372 religious bodies; of these, the Religion Census also reports affiliated individuals, i.e., adherents, for 217. Most religious bodies with adherent data reported their own adherents. For others with reported adherent data, the Religion Census used a variety of methods to estimate adherents. The most common methods were using membership data provided by bodies to estimate adherents younger than 14 years of age and using a multiple of attendance data provided by a body or other sources to estimate all adherents.

For the first method, we assumed that all members were at least 14 years of age and that the member percentage of the population at least 14 years of age applied to the population younger than 14 as well. Multiplying these percentages by the population in the two age groups and then summing the results yields estimated adherents under this procedure.

For the second method, we assumed attendance (either reported by the body or derived from another source) represented a specified fraction of adherents. Hence, multiplying attendance by the appropriate number (e.g., two for a body that typically sees one-half of its adherents at services) yields adherent estimates.

The concluding table to this section summarizes methods used for adherents, i.e., whether the body supplied its own adherent figures or the Religion Census estimated them. The appendices on our methods provide, where applicable, estimation details for individual religious bodies,

Locating Members by County

Membership and adherent statistics are generally reported for the county in which the congregation itself is located, rather than for the county in which an affiliated individual resides. We assume the county of residence will correspond to the county of the congregation in most cases, although modern mobility patterns suggest caution in accepting this assumption in every case. Especially in large urban areas, combining counties into standard metropolitan areas might be wiser when citing adherent proportions.

Membership or Adherents without Congregations

In nearly all cases, members and adherents were reported for congregations. Exceptions include Bahá'í (which reported adherents in 2,125 counties without congregations), Conservative Congregational Christian Conference (1 county), Dunkard Brethren Church (1 county), Hoover Old Order Mennonite Church (2 counties), Independent Conservative Brethren (1 county), Old Brethren (California) (3 counties), Old German Baptist Brethren, New Conference (5 counties), Orthodox Judaism (11 counties), Orthodox Mennonite Church (1 county), Weaverland Mennonite Conference (44 counties). For the Bahá'í, there are independent records for the location of adherents—76 percent of whom are in counties with Bahá'í congregations. Among all ten groups listed here, 96 percent of adherents are reported in counties with congregations for their religious body.

County Listings

The 2020 U.S. Religion Census uses the same 3,143 counties or county-equivalents as the 2020 U.S. Census. These include census areas in Alaska, the District of Columbia, civil parishes in Louisiana, and independent cities, most prevalent in Virginia. These areas can change over time; users wishing to understand how these have changed in the course of this series may wish to consult the Census Bureau listing of Substantial Changes to Counties and County-Equivalent Entities since 1970 at <https://www.census.gov/programs-surveys/geography/technical-documentation/county-changes.html>.

Reporting Date

We sought statistics comparable to the April 1, 2020, U.S. Census. Accordingly, we asked participants to provide data for their reporting year ending within calendar year 2020. Nevertheless, several bodies, because of difficulties in reporting statistics during the COVID-19 pandemic, reported statistics for a different year, typically 2019 or 2021. For more details on reporting year by religious body, see Appendix A.

Accuracy of Reporting Procedures

Most large Protestant denominations maintain national offices that receive statistical reports from their individual congregations; we used these reports to provide county membership figures for this study.

Many smaller groups, as well as those in which local congregations have a great deal of autonomy, only request and do not require such reports. This means that data for several groups is not as complete and current as might be desired.

We asked groups furnishing data to comment on the accuracy of their reporting procedures and to furnish copies of the forms they used to collect the data. Those forms that were received are in the data collection office at the Church of the Nazarene Global Ministry Center. We reproduce comments on accuracy in Appendix A.

Dual Affiliation

We asked each group, “Do any local congregations of your group maintain affiliation with another group as well?” Comments we received on dual affiliation are in Appendix A.

Membership Greater Than Population

There are 30 counties or equivalents for which the number of reported adherents exceeds the total population in 2020. These are ARKANSAS: Ouachita; COLORADO: Kiowa; IDAHO: Franklin; KENTUCKY: Edmonson, Hickman; LOUISIANA: St. James Parish; MISSOURI: Worth; NEBRASKA: Greeley, Hooker; NEW MEXICO: De Baca, Harding; NORTH CAROLINA: Chowan; NORTH DAKOTA: Emmons; OKLAHOMA: Harmon; SOUTH DAKOTA: Lyman; TEXAS: Collingsworth, Edwards, Haskell, King, Morris, Schleicher, Stonewall, Terrell, Throckmorton; UTAH: Rich; VIRGINIA: Bristol city, Colonial Heights city, Franklin city, Fredericksburg city, Martinsville city.

Reasons for the discrepancy will differ from county to county, but the most plausible would include U.S. Census undercount, church membership overcount, and county of residence differing from county of membership. This is especially likely in Virginia, where many cities are independent from adjoining counties.

Data Presentation

The U.S. Religion Census website (<https://www.usreligioncensus.org/>) includes two separate data files and several maps illustrating our data. In addition, the website for the Association of Religion Data Archives (<https://thearda.com/>) presents national-, state-, and county-level summaries of congregations and adherents from 1980 to 2020.

Files on the U.S. Religion Census Website

The U.S. Religion Census website presents a variety of maps and two data files for download at <https://www.usreligioncensus.org/node/1639>.

One of the two data files at the U.S. Religion Census website is “2020 Summary data by nation, state, county and metro.” This file presents tabs for the nation, states, counties, and metropolitan or micropolitan statistical areas data on

- Total population
- Total congregations reported
- Total adherents reported
- Congregations per 100,000 population
- Adherents as % of population.

So, for example, the U.S. Summary tab shows there were 107.6 congregations reported to the U.S. Religion Census per 100,000 population in the United States in 2020, while the County Summary tab shows that adherents reported by the U.S. Religion Census were 53.7 percent of the population in Baldwin County, Alabama.

The “2020 Group detail data by nation, state, county and metro” file presents on tabs for the nation, states, counties, and metropolitan or micropolitan statistical areas data by individual religious bodies on

- Congregations
- Adherents
- Adherents as % of total adherents
- Adherents as % of total population.

So, for example, the Group by Nation tab shows the 2020 U.S. Religion Census reported 3,667 congregations and 1,059,888 adherents across the nation for the African Methodist Episcopal (AME) Church (ASARB Group Code 003), with AME adherents representing 0.7 percent of all adherents reported and 0.3 percent of the population. The Group by County tab shows the Religion Census reported 3 congregations and 378 adherents for the AME Church in Baldwin County, Alabama, with AME adherents representing 0.7 percent of all adherents reported and 0.4 percent of the population.

Maps on the U.S. Religion Census Website

The U.S. Religion Census website provides an interactive county-level maps page at <https://www.usreligioncensus.org/index.php/interactive-maps>. This page offers two sets of maps, both covering Religion Census data from 1980, 1990, 2000, 2010, and 2020.

The first group of maps, featuring data including All Participating Religious Groups, allows users to view maps showing by year

- Percent of the population claimed by all participating religious bodies
- Total adherents claimed by all participating religious groups grouped into five equal-sized categories
- Percent of the population claimed by all participating religious groups grouped into five equal-sized categories.

The second group of maps, featuring data by specific religious groups, allows users to select a specific religious body and then view maps showing by year the body’s

- Congregations
- Percent of population claimed grouped into fixed categories (more than 5.0 percent, 1.0 to 5.0 percent, 0.5 to 1.0 percent, 0.1 to 0.5 percent, less than 0.1 percent, or no presence)
- Total adherents claimed grouped into five equal-sized categories
- Percent of the population claimed by a religious body, grouped into five equal-sized categories.

In addition, the website offers at <https://www.usreligioncensus.org/node/1639> a portable document format (pdf) map of Major Religious Families of the United States. A color code on this map indicates, for each county, the participating group that predominates. The classifications of this map are based primarily upon family groupings found previously in the Yearbook of American and Canadian Churches as well as subsequent classifications of the U.S. Religion Census over time. Some groups, such as Catholics and Muslims, are not grouped into families but treated as separate units. For a list of all denominational family classifications for bodies reporting adherents to the 2020 Religion Census, see the table below.

Christian and Missionary Alliance	1
Presbyterian	1
Seventh-day Adventist	1

A solid color on the map or upper-case label indicates that a group has 50 percent or more of the total adherents in that county, as reported in the 2020 Religion Census. When no group has 50 percent, striped shading or lower-case label indicates the largest group with 25 to 49 percent of adherents in a county. The 181 counties where no group has 25 percent of adherents are left blank. The percentages on which the map is based derive from the “2020 Group detail data by nation, state, county and metro” file column on (individual group) adherents as % of total adherents column.

Persons wishing a 24” by 36” wall display map of denominational families by county may request one for free from the Glenmary Home Missioners, www.glenmary.org, or by writing to grc@glenmary.org.

Methodology

The Church of the Nazarene Global Ministry Center in Lenexa, Kansas, carried out the actual data collection. Richard Houseal, Research Services Manager, oversaw data collection.

After updating address information, we first sent invitations to bodies that participated in the 2010 Religion Census as well those listed in the last Yearbook of American and Canadian Churches published in 2012. We further sought contact information from the Handbook of Denominations, 14th edition, and Melton's Encyclopedia of American Religions, 8th edition. For every religious body for which we could find contact information, we sent an email invitation, followed by postal mail, followed by phone calls. For bodies that did not respond to our invitations, but for which we were able to find local congregation or adherent information, we tabulated information as necessary. The table below summarizes the source of information for each body included in the 2020 U.S. Religion Census.

Groups agreeing to participate were asked to appoint a contact person. We sent two forms to the contact person: instructions for reporting data, and a transmittal sheet to be signed and sent with the data collected. When asked, we provided a state-county form for listing the statistics. Contact persons could provide the data electronically, in printout, or using the state-county listing provided.

The process put the major burden of work on the offices of the various religious groups, since they were asked to compile data by county for all their congregations. In some cases, groups were able to furnish information only in the form of directories, yearbooks, or other sources. Transferring such information into county data then became the responsibility of the Church of the Nazarene Research Services. In a few cases, the groups instructed the staff to estimate congregational membership according to some formula and approved the result. In all instances, the contact person was asked to review the statistics.

The Research Services staff employed standard procedures for checking the accuracy of data submitted. This included checking state and national totals against county data and adjusting discrepancies (reviewing adjustments with the contact person) and, when appropriate, applying the estimating procedure for adherents. We prepared several items for review by the contact person. These included a spreadsheet of the data that compared 2020 figures to 2010 figures for each county and state, as well as maps showing 2020 location of counties and the 2020 ratio of adherents to each county's population.

The final step was to run a series of computer edit tests to check for errors. Finding incorrect county codes and locating records with no data were the most common corrections at that step. After this, the Church of the Nazarene Research Services staff produced the files and maps on the Religion Census website and for posting to the ARDA website.
