

Maps Section

The following pages contain 37 maps showing the distribution of congregations or adherents for various groupings of religious bodies, or for individual religious bodies. All of the maps present data at the county and county equivalent level. In 2020, there were 3,143 counties and county equivalents in the United States.

The first map represents data from all 372 religious bodies for which the study reports their number of congregations (Religious Congregations by County, page 245). The next two maps represent data from the 217 religious bodies for which the study reports their number of adherents (Religious Adherents by County, page 246, and Largest Religious Body by County, page 247).

The next six maps show the distribution of adherents as a percentage of the population for the following faith traditions: Bahá'í (page 248), Buddhism (page 249), Christianity (page 250), Hinduism (page 251), Islam (page 252), and Judaism (page 253). These maps are followed by one showing the Largest Non-Christian Religious Body (page 254).

The final series of 20 maps show the distribution of adherents as a percentage of the population for Christian bodies reporting more than 1,000,000 adherents or having congregations in more than 1,500 counties and county equivalents. The scale used for these maps remains the same so that the reader may easily compare these bodies to one another. These maps include:

Readers are encouraged to visit www.USReligionCensus.org and explore the online interactive mapping feature. Online mapping allows the user to map every religious body that has participated in the U.S. Religion Census and its predecessor studies since the 1952 Churches and Church Membership was published. Users may choose different types of maps, view maps with different scales, and compare religious body changes over time.
